Domain: Systems Thinking

Level: 5-12

Comic Strip Sequencing

Materials Needed: Comic strips, cut into individual frames (one frame per participant)

Time Allocation 5-10 minutes

Cut comic strips into individual frames and pass them out to the group. Ask everyone to locate others with frames from that particular comic. Once they have done that, have them arrange the frames to make sense. This activity can be an easy way to divide into smaller groups, if all of the comic strips have the same number of frames.

Questions:

How did you locate your group members? Could it have been done more efficiently?

How did you determine the order for the frames?

Was there any difficulty in getting the job done? How were leadership roles determined? Did everyone feel included?
